A Prayer

Father, surgery is coming, and I feel the weight of everything I cannot control. You know the fear sitting in my heart tonight — the unknowns, the waiting, the what-ifs I keep turning over. Thank you that you will be in that operating room when I cannot be, steadying the hands of every doctor and nurse and watching over every moment. Quiet my racing thoughts and give me the kind of peace that does not depend on knowing the outcome. Whatever the result, help me to trust that I am held by a God who is good and who never leaves. Into your hands I place this body, this day, and the people I love. Amen.
